Try Again.

The following poetical version of the well-known incident related of Robert Bruce, who was encouraged to make another and successful effort to regain the throne of Scotland by observing the perseverance and success of a spider, is from the pen of Eliza Cook.

Once Bruce of Scotland flung him down
In a lowly mood to think:
"This time he was monarch and wore a crown,
But his heart was beginning to sink.
For he had been trying to do a great deed
To make his people glad;
He had tried and tried, but he could not succeed,
And his heart was sore and sad.
He flung himself down in despair,
As grieved as man could be;
And as he lay there pondered there,
"I must give it up at last," said he.
Now just at the moment a spider dropped,
With its silken webbed clue;
And the king, in the midst of his thinking, stopped
To see what the spider would do.
It soon began to climb and climb
Straight up with steady endeavor;
But down it came, after a while,
As near to the ground as ever.
But, nothing discouraged, again it went,
Higher and higher;
"Twas a delicate thread it had to tread,
And a road where its feet would tread.
Again it fell and swung below,
But again it quickly mounted;
Till up and down, now fast, now slow,
Its little attempts were counted.
"Sure," cried the king, "the foolish thing
Will strive no more to climb,
When it tells so hard to reach and cling,
And tumbles every time."
But steadily upward, inch by inch,
Higher and higher it passed,
Till it had reached the very top perch,
Put it into its web at last.
"Bravo! bravo!" the king cried out,
"Admirer to those who try;
The spider up there defied despair—
He conquered, why shouldn't I?"
And Bruce of Scotland braved his mind,
He tried once more, as he'd tried before,
And that time he did not fail. —Selected.

VARIETY.

Where hard work kills ten, idleness kills a hundred men.
Folly and pride walk side by side.
He that borrows binds himself with his neighbor's rope.
He that is too good for his neighbor's advice is too good for his neighbor's company.
Friends and photographs never flatter.
Wisdom is always at home to those who call.
The firmest friends ask the fewest favors.
Slanders, issuing from beautiful lips, are like spiders crawling from the blushing heart of a rose.
Value the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm; swarms of insects will surround you in the sunshine.
Talk of fame and romance—all the glory and adventure in the world are not worth one hour of domestic life.
The singing of a kettle in one respect resembles the singing of a stage-singer. An attempt to overdo it will be followed by a hiss.
A young lady who had lost or mislaid her beau, was advised to hang up her fiddle. She said the advice did great violence to her heart-strings.
What are you looking after, my daughter? said an old gentleman to a young lady. Looking after a son-in-law for you, father, was the witty reply.
How do you get that lovely perfume? asked one young lady of another. It's "sent" to me, she replied.
A good name is rather to be chosen than gold, riches, and leaving far rather than silver and gold.
While walking, a gentleman accidentally stepped upon a lady's trailing dress. She turned with a frowning look and strong expression of anger. With great urgency, he replied: "I am sorry, madam, very sorry indeed; but, really, I didn't know that I was within a quarter of a mile of you."

The Power of Jaw.—The muscles of the human jaw produce a power equal to 254 pounds. This is only what science tells us, but we know the jaw of some of our lawyers is equal to a good many pounds a year to them.
When the wind moves at the rate of one mile an hour, it is hardly perceptible; at two miles an hour, it fans us as the gentle zephyr; at six it becomes high, and thirty to fifty characterize storms from light to hard; at eighty miles an hour it becomes a hurricane, and at one hundred miles an hour it becomes a tornado.
Good Habits.—There are four good habits—punctuality, accuracy, steadiness and dispatch. Without the first of these, time is wasted; without the second, mistakes the most hurtful to our own credit and interest; and that of others, may be committed; without the third, nothing can be well done; and without the fourth, opportunities of great advantage are lost, which it is impossible to recall.

"My Father—My Mother Loved Me."—Send your children to bed happy. Whatever cares press, give it a warm good night kiss, as it goes to its pillow. The memory of this, in the stormy years which fate may have in store for the little one, will be like Bethlehem's star to the bewildered shepherd. "My father—my mother loved me." Fate cannot take away the blessed heart balm. Lips parched with the world's fever will become dewy again at this thrill of youthful memories. Kiss your little child before it goes to sleep.
PRESTIDIGIAN.—The rising generation in the South will be proud of their ancient line if it shall turn out to be a humper one.
We don't see why the papers call George Francis Train rattle-pate. There's nothing in his pate to rattle.

A New York editor asks the Army of the Potomac why it doesn't advance. He might as well ask such a question of a mired ox.
The only fighting some folks are in favor of is like charities they are in favor of—other people's.

ABOUT BABIES.—To an outsider, a family of children, as they are generally to be seen, with a growth of curly, or molasses upon the patches of dirt scattered thickly over their round cheeks, with chubby hands deep in the ashes or dirt pile, and their little voices breaking out every instant in the inevitable screams which result from some of the numerous accidents of childhood, form at first sight a disagreeable consequence rather than otherwise. The individual who has never known the joy of owning a baby, has no conception of the interest which attaches to its every movement, he has no idea of the genius which is discovered in its eyes, of precocious intellect in its method of making dirt-pies, of the music in its most frantic screams, and the beauty which parental eyes can see under a burnt skin and tow hair.—Talks on Women's Topics.
